A woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, brake and poured it on his head.
He cast into the pile bundles of myrrh, and sheaves of spike- nard, enriching it with every spicy shrub. Speckator.

SPILL, n. f. [spijlen, Dutch.]
1. A small thiver of wood, or thin bar of iron.

The oysters, besides gathering by hand, have a peculiar dredge, which is a thick strong net, fastened to three spills of iron, and drawn at the boat's stern. Carew.

Have near the bung-hole a little vent-hole, stopped with a spill. Mortimer.

2. A small quantity of money. I know not whence derived.

The bishops, who consecrated this ground, were wont to have a spill or sportule from the credulous laity. A. Liff.

To SPILL, v. a. [spylan, Saxon; spillen, Dutch; spilla, Mandick.]

1. To shed; to lose by shedding.

Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt. Shaksp.

Friend or brother,
He forfeits his own blood that spills another. Shak. Timon.

Themselves exact their cruelty,
And I constrained am this blood to spill. Daniel's Civil War.

They having spilt much blood, and done much waste, Subduing nations; and atchiev'd thereby
Fame in the world, high titles, and rich prey, Shall change their course to pleasure, ease, and sloth. Milton.

Sichaus' blood, by his false brother spilt,
I have reveng'd. Denham.

Medea must not draw her mouth-ringing knife,
And spill her children's blood upon the stage. Rowe's Comm.

Orbellan did disgrace
With treach'rous deeds our mighty mother's race;
And to revenge his blood, so justly spilt,
What is it less than to partake his guilt? Dryden.

Nor the Centaurs tale
Be here repeated; how, with lust and wine
Inflam'd, they fought and spilt their drunken souls
At feasting hour. Philips.

2. To destroy; to mischief.

Thus is our thought with pain of thistle tilled,
Thus be our noblest parts dried up with sorrow;
Thus is our mind with too much minding spilt. Sidney.

Why are ye so fierce and cruel?
Is it because your eyes have power to kill?
Then know that mercy is the Mighty's jewel,
And greater glory think to save than spill. Spenser.

Thou all-shaking thunder,
Crack nature's mould, all germin's spill at once
That make ingrateful man. Shaksp. King Lear.

Be not angry with these fires;
For then their threats will kill me:
Nor look too kind on my desires;
For then my hopes will spill me. Ben. Jonson.

All bodies are with other bodies fill'd;
But she receives both heav'n and earth together:
Nor are their forms by rash encounters spilt;
For there they stand, and neither toucheth either. Davies.

3. To throw away.

This fight shall damp the raging ruffian's breast,
The poison spill, and half-drawn sword arrest. Tickell.

To SPILL, v. n.

1. To waste; to be lavish.

Thy father bids thee spare, and chides for spilling. Sidney.

2. To be shed; to be lost by being shed.

He was so topfull of himself, that he let it spill on all the company: he spoke well indeed, but he spoke too long. Watts.

SPILLER, n. f. [I know not whence derived.] A kind of sifting line.

In harbour they are taken by spillers made of a cord, to which divers shorter are tied at a little distance, and to each of these a hook is fastened with a bait: this spiller they sink in the sea where those fishes have their accustomed haunt. Carew.

SPILTH, n. f. [from spill.] Any thing poured out or wasted.

Our vaults have wept with drunken spilth of wine. Shaksp.

To SPIN, v. a. preter. spun or span; part. spun. [spinnan, Sax. spinnen, Dutch.]

1. To draw out into threads.

The women spin goats hair. Ex. xxxv. 26.

2. To form threads by drawing out and twisting any filamentous matter.

You would be another Penelope; yet they say all the yarn she spun, in Ulysses's absence, did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

The fates but only spin the coarser clue;
The finest of the wool is left for you. Dryden.

3. To protract; to draw out.

By one delay after another they spin out their whole lives,
'till there's no more future left before 'em. L'Estrange.

If his cure lies among the lawyers let nothing be said against intangling property, spinning out causes, and squeezing clients. Collier.

Why should Rome fall a moment ere her time?
No, let us draw her term of freedom out
In its full length, and spin it to the last. Addison's Cat.

4. To form by degrees; to draw out tediously.

I passed lightly over many particulars, on which learned and witty men might spin out large volumes. Digby.

Men of large thoughts and quick apprehensions are not to expect any thing here, but what, being spun out of my own coarse thoughts, is fitted to men of my own size. Locke.

The lines are weak, another's pleas'd to say;
Lord Fanny spins a thousand such a day. Pope.

To SPIN, v. n.

1. To exercise the art of spinning.

We can fling our legs and arms upwards and downwards, backwards, forwards, and round, as they that spin. Morse.

Ten thousand stalks their various blossoms spread;
Peaceful and lowly in their native soil,
They neither know to spin, nor care to toil. Prior.

For this Alcides learn'd to spin;
His club laid down, and lion's skin. Prior.

2. [Spingare, Italian.] To stream out in a thread or small current.

Together furiously they ran,
That to the ground came horse and man;
The blood out of their helmets spans,
So sharp were their encounters. Drayton's Nymphid.

3. To move round as a spindle.

Whether the fun, predominant in heav'n,
Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the fun,
He from the East his flaming road begin,
Or the from West her silent course advance
With inoffensive pace, that spinning sleeps
On her soft axle, while the paces e'en
And bears thee soft with the smooth air along,
Solicit not thy thoughts. Milton's Paradise Lost, l. viii.

As when a shipwright stands his workmen o'er,
Who ply the wimble some huge beam to bore;
Urg'd on all hands it nimbly spins about,
The grain deep piercing 'till it scoops it out. Pope.

SPINACH, n. f. [spinachia, Latin.] A plant.

SPINAGE, n. f. [spinachia, Latin.] A plant.

It hath an apetalous flower, consisting of many stamina included in the flower-cup, which are produced in spikes upon the male plants which are barren; but the embryos are produced from the wings of the leaves on the female plants, which afterward become roundish or angular seeds, which, in some sorts, have thorns adhering to them. Miller.

SPINAGE is an excellent herb crude, or boiled. Mortimer.

SPINAL, adj. [spina, Latin.] Belonging to the back bone.

All spinal, or such as have no ribs, but only a back bone, are somewhat analogous thereto. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Those solids are entirely nervous, and proceed from the brain, and spinal marrow, which by their bulk appear sufficient to furnish all the stamina or threads of the solid parts. Steele.

Descending careles from his couch, the fall
Lux'd his joint neck and spinal marrow bruise'd. Philips.

SPINDLE, n. f. [spindel, pmbel, Saxon.]

1. The pin by which the thread is formed, and on which it is conglomerated.

Bodies fibrous by moisture incorporate with other thread, especially if there be a little wreathing; as appeareth by the twisting of thread, and twirling about of spindles. Bacon.

Sing to those that hold the vital fibres,
And turn the adamant spindle round
On which the fate of gods and men is wound. Milton.

Upon a true repentance, God is not so fatally tied to the spindle of absolute reprobation as not to keep his promise, and deal merciful pardons. Dr. Jasper Maitre.

So Pallas from the dusty field withdrew,
And when imperial Jove appear'd in view,
Refum'd her female arts, the spindle and the clew;
Forgot the scepter she so well had sway'd,
And with that mildness, she had rul'd, obey'd. Stepney.

Do you take me for a Roman matron, Bred tamely to the spindle and the loom? A. Phillips.

2. A long slender stalk.

The spindles must be tied up, and, as they grow in height, rods set by them, left by their bending they should break. Mort.

3. Any thing slender. In contempt.

Repose yourself, if those spindles legs of yours will carry you to the next chair. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

The marriage of one of our heiresses with an eminent countier gave us spindle thanks and cramps. Taylor.

To SPINDLE, v. n. [from the noun.] To shoot into a long small stalk.

Another ill accident in drought is the spindling of the corn, which with us is rare, but in hotter countries common; insomuch as the word calamity was first derived from calamus, when the corn could not get out of the stalk. Bacon.

When the flowers begin to spindle, all but one or two of the biggest, at each root, should be nipped off. Mortimer.

a small aperture.

Most of these spinacles perpetually send forth fire, more or less. Woodward.

SPIRAL, adj. [spirale, Fr. from spira, Latin.] Curve; winding; circularly involved.

The process of the fibres in the ventricles, running in spiral lines from the tip to the base of the heart, shews that the fibrolo of the heart is a muscular contraction, as a purse is shut by drawing the strings contrary ways. Ray.

Why earth or sun diurnal stages keep?
In spiral tracks why through the zodiac creep? Blackmore.

The intestinal tube affects a straight, instead of a spiral cylinder. Arbutnot on Aliments.

SPIRALLY, adv. [from spiral.] In a spiral form.

The fibres are composed of two orders of fibres running circularly or spirally from base to tip. Ray on the Creation.

1. A curve line; anything wreathed or contorted; a curl; a twist; a wreath.

His head
Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes;
With burnish'd neck of verdant gold, erect Amidst his circling spires, that on the grafs Floated redundant. Milton.

A dragon's fiery form belied the god,
Sublime on radiant spires he rode. Dryden.

Air seems to consist of spires contorted into small spheres, through the interstices of which the particles of light may freely pass it is light, the solid substance of the spires being very small in proportion to the spaces they take up. Cheyne.

2. Any thing growing up taper; a round pyramid, so called perhaps because a line drawn round and round in less and less circles, would be a spire; a steeple.

With glistening spires and pinnacles adorn'd. Milton.

He cannot make one spire of grass more or less than he hath made. Hale's Orig. of Mankind.
